at Maine had better
tion to prohibition
ze a national party, temperance in Maine

practically all we can convert Texas and Alabama. That is precisely what this national prohibition party means, for those who talk frankly avow that they intended to defeat the republican party and bring the democratic party in power as a temperance movement and then the prohibition party outside of prohibition is entering into a partnership with the democratic party to defeat the republicans if that were possible in Maine to elect that saintly embodiment of prohibition and temperance David B. Hill governor of New York, and all over the country to stab the republican party to the back and in the dark as only they say that the democratic party shall be brought into power. Then there will be a reaction against the democratic and by some political process of which as working is not yet apparent the national prohibitionists will come into power. Fellow citizens, the republicans of Maine have marked thirty years in advance of temperance reform, and will not turn back from the good cause.

Base Ball.

At Boston—Boston 9, Washington 1.

At New York—New York 2, Philadelphia 1.

At Indianapolis—Indianapolis 1, Pittsburg 5.

At Chicago—Sunday's game: Chicago 9, Detroit 2; yesterday's game, Chicago 2, Detroit 5.

At Baltimore—Baltimore 9, Kansas City 2.

At Omaha—Omaha 1, Chicago 5.

At Philadelphia—Athletics 3, Cincinnati 2.

At Cleveland—Cleveland 12, Louisville 3.

At New York—Brooklyn 8, St. Louis 1.

The Yellow Fever Plague.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., September 4.—Seventeen new cases were reported up to noon to-day. No deaths. Representatives of the board of health, and citizens' association, are now leaving for Camp Perry to confer with Surgeon General Hamilton, when it is hoped that plans for depopulating the city will be perfected.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., September 4.—The schooner Abell Thackeray, from Havana, anchored Delaware breakwater yesterday with several cases of yellow fever on board. Two sailors died several days ago. The vessel was removed to the United States quarantine.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., September 4.—The official bulletin this afternoon reports forty-three new cases and one death. To-morrow a special citizens' sanitary association committee will begin taking a census looking to a systematic depopulation of the city.

New Monuments at Gettysburg.

GETTYSBURG, Pa., September 4.—New York dedicated three monuments to-day. That of the 108th regiment at Siegler's grove represents a clover leaf with the recumbent figure of a soldier at one side. The monument of the 104th regiment on Reynolds avenues was dedicated at 3 o'clock. The monument is a plain one, suitably inscribed, but has a massive appearance. The monument of the 123d regiment on Culp's Hill was presented to the association. The monument is an exceedingly fine one, twenty feet high, surmounted by a life-size figure of History, similar to the one on the national monument in the Soldiers' cemetery.

The Exposition Opened.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, September 4.—The Ohio centennial exposition opened this morning. The city is profusely decorated and the streets crowded. There is a great agricultural, mechanical and stock show at the fair grounds. Six thousand Ohio militia paraded this morning and were reviewed by Governor Foraker. Mrs. Governor Foraker started the machinery this afternoon.

An Unruly English Audience.

LONDON, September 4.—Mr. Gladstone addressed a meeting of liberals at Wrexham last night. There were local jealousies resulting in a disturbance and confusion, one part of the audience cheering and the other hissing, and Mr. Gladstone was obliged to stop speaking for five minutes.

Legislation Against Trusts.

WASHINGTON, September 4.—Senator Sherman's bill directed against trusts was considered by the senate committee on finance to-day, but no action was reached. The tenor of the remarks indicated an approval of the general principles of the measure by the committee.

A Flood in Japan.

SAN FRANCISCO, September 4.—The steamer City of Rio de Janeiro brings news from Japan that at Tokushing, a town in the Province of Awa, a storm occurred on the night of the 4th ultimo and continued raging on the 5th. In Mayosago an inundation was caused by which 180 houses were destroyed and forty-six persons were drowned.

Weather Indications.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 4, 10 p. m.

Indications for twenty-four hours commencing at 8 a. m. to-morrow:

For Colorado: Fair, slight changes in temperature, southerly winds.

Didn't Like Their Politics.

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., September 4.—On Sunday night two respectable citizens named George Jones and John M. Willis were murdered by Samuel Hare. The only excuse the murderer has is that Jones and Willis hurrahed for Cleveland. The murderer was arrested.

Opposed to Foreign Labor.

PHILADELPHIA, September 4.—The American workmen in the rolling mill at Conshohocken to-day began a crusade against the Italians and Hungarians, serving notice on them to leave. Several collisions have occurred and a number of Italians have left.

Stock Markets.

NEW YORK, September 4.—The stock market to-day was stronger than it has been for some weeks. There was some considerable realizing at the close, but the result of trading is to leave a majority of stocks materially lower than last week. Governments dull and steady.

CHINESE EXCLUSION.

Senator Teller Favors the House Bill Against Chinese.

Interesting Inside History of Its Origin Furnished.

Impropriety of Scott Posing as the Friend of Labor.

Hitt Speaks on the House on the Retaliation Message.

Fifteenth Congress.

FIRST SESSION.

WASHINGTON, September 4.—Cole called attention to the resolution adopted at the recent convention at Denver in favor of a deep water harbor on the northwest coast of the Gulf of Mexico, suggesting that a committee representative of delegates be selected who is not known to have been honestly in favor of any appropriation for that purpose and will not work for it earnestly and faithfully. He also presented a memorial on the same subject from the deep water harbor committee of Galveston and asked that it be printed in the Record. So ordered.

Cullom offered resolutions (adopted) recalling on the secretary of war for information as to the channel ordinarily used for navigation of the Detroit river at St. Clair flats, whether its waters were within the jurisdiction of the United States or Canada, etc.

Cullom also introduced a bill to declare trusts unlawful and had it referred to the committee on finance.

At 2.45 the senate resumed consideration of the house bill to prohibit Chinese immigration, and was addressed by Teller in its support.

He replied to the argument made yesterday to charge forgetting the responsibility for the presence of the Chinese on the republican party. He disclaimed such responsibility and defended the course of Harrison in his votes in the senate on the anti-Chinese legislation. The republican candidate for the presidency had recognized the same position on the Chinese question as he. Teller, had always occupied, and was as sound as any man in the world on the question of protection to American labor, whether against the pauper labor of Europe or the pauper labor of China.

Teller proceeded to compare the course of the two parties on the Chinese question in California. The only state which that question had crystallized into public opinion, and claimed that the republican party had always been opposed to Chinese immigration, while the democratic party had not even Governor Stanford's message to the legislature in 1862 had been the first official declaration against it.

Mr. Teller enquired whether the Central Pacific Railroad Co., of which Stanford was president, had not imported Mongolian labor to build the road.

Teller—No, sir; not any other railroad company. They [illegible] their own ground.

As to the pending bill he mentioned the remark he had that it had passed the house without reference to any committee, and that it had been introduced not by a member of the committee on foreign affairs, but by a man who in no sense and under no circumstances had a right to speak for American labor. As the senator from South Carolina (Butler) had said yesterday, with great frankness, the bill was a political movement. He did not find it stated in the Record that the bill had been drawn in the office of the solicitor general, but he heard it so stated outside, and that it was sent down from the executive department to be passed. If he were to look over the house to select a man who most fitly represented the American people who toil he would hardly select the man who had succeeded in getting that bill through the house. He had only succeeded because he represented the prejudices [illegible] other man in the democratic party. It was said of him (Mr. Scott) that he had given ten times as much money to the democratic fund as the president had given. He was able to do so, as he was said to have made millions out of the [illegible] In this connection Mr. Teller sent to the clerk's desk and had read Scott's autobiographical sketch in the congressional directory.

The presiding officer (Mr. Ingalls)—The chair takes occasion to remark that while it is undoubtedly in order to refer to the acts of the other house, it is a violation of privilege to refer to individual characters or to the conduct of members of that body. It interferes with the absolute independence which ought to exist between the two houses, and the chair thinks perhaps the debate has already gone farthest than it should have gone. The general parliamentary law on this subject is so well defined that the chair thinks it unnecessary to allude to it further.

Mr. Teller—I will not address myself any farther to any member of congress nor to a person acting in another capacity, as a member of the democratic national committee. Rumor says that this bill was prepared for the purpose of affecting the election on the Pacific slope. I do not care whether this legislation gets on the statute book because the chairman of the democratic committee or a member of it is anxious to make political capital. I am for the legislation and therefore I welcome it.

At the close of Teller's speech the Chinese bill went over. After executive session the senate adjourned.

House.

WASHINGTON, September 4.—In the house today Mr. Kelley of Pennsylvania offered a resolution directing that the speaker's committee on investigating the construction of the new library building shall inquire whether any member of the house has by himself, or in combination with others, sought by persuasion, intimidation or corrupt or improper means, influenced J. L. Smithmeyer, the architect, in the selection, acceptance or approval of inferior or improper material to be used in the construction of that building.

Mr. Kelley stated that he made the [illegible] the house on information which he received in the early part of the session and which had been corroborated by increasing testimony and additional facts. He would name the member when he appeared before the committee.

Mr. Blount of Georgia intimated that this charge was brought at the instigation of Mr. Smithmeyer as an offset.

Mr. Kelley declared that the offering of the resolution was his own act and the result of his own cool calm long intended purpose to have the country know some of the facts that had come to his knowledge early in the session. Neither Mr. Smithmeyer, nor any other

The Green Mountain State Announces Her Position.

Republicans Claim a Majority of Twenty-Eight Thousand.

New Hampshire Republicans Nominate Their Ticket.

Connecticut Democrats Accept the Issue of the Tariff.

The Vermont Election.

BURLINGTON, Vt., September 4.—Indications point to the largest vote ever cast in the state. Dillingham and Woodbury will [illegible] majority.

The weather is fine all over the state.

WHITE RIVER JUNCTION, Vt., September 4.—Returns from 165 towns give Dillingham, republican, 25,375; Shurtleff, democrat, 2,849; Seeley, prohibitionist, [illegible]. The same towns in 1884 gave—Pingree, republican, 22,169; Robinson, democratic, 9,499; Stone, prohibitionist, and scattering, 472. Being over vote of 1884: republican, 3,206; democrats, 350; prohibitionists, 151; net republican gain over democratic vote, 1,856 [illegible].

WHITE RIVER JUNCTION, Vt., September 4.—In 123 towns the republican plurality over the democrats is 18,151; majority over all, 17,495. At an two-thirds of the whole vote this year [illegible] received. If the same relative gain is maintained in the remaining towns the republican majority will be about 25,000, of the largest since the war.

MONTPELIER, Vt., September 4.—Returns from the state election are coming in slowly, but reports from different counties indicate a majority of 25,000 for Dillingham, republican, for governor. Some republican leaders claim as high as 28,000. Congressmen Stewart and Grout were elected by increased majorities.

New Hampshire Republicans.

CONCORD, N. H., September 4.—The republican state convention was called to order by Hon. J. H. Gallinger, chairman of the state committee. Tickets were distributed bearing the names of John B. Smith, of Hillsboro; Hiram A. Tuttle, of Pittsfield; David H. Goodall, of Antrim; H. H. Metcher, of Laconia; Albert S. Twitchell and John A. Spaulding, of Nashua, as candidates for the gubernatorial nomination. A. Haynes, of Lake Village, was chosen permanent chairman. In his speech he charged that among Cleveland's appointments to public places in New Hampshire are murderers, forgers, robbers, thieves, embezzlers, wife-beaters, black mailers, etc. The convention then proceeded to ballot for governor. At 2.30 four ballots had been taken with no choice, Tuttle having 186, while 316 was necessary for choice.

In the fifth ballot there were nine votes more cast than there were delegates, and before no choice, but a large sensation. The seventh ballot was at once taken, with this result: Whole number cast, necessary to a choice 301; Spaulding 1, Smith 122, Metcher 22, Tuttle 305, Goodell 230. Goodell was declared nominated.

The platform endorses the national republican platform and candidates, and declares that the American doctrine of protection should be defended against the assaults of free trade at home and abroad; invites the co-operation of all who believe in the enactment of laws for the protection of our industries from the competition of the pauper labor of the old world, of our laborers from the unjust exactions of employers, our property owners from the attacks of anarchism and communism, and of all classes from the evils of immorality and illiteracy.

Connecticut Democrats.

NEW HAVEN, September 4.—The democratic state convention was called to order by Chairman Dooley of the state central committee. Congressman R. J. Vance was made chairman. The usual committees were appointed.

The platform endorses the president, and the tariff measure in particular; congratulates democrats of the house upon the passage of the Mills bill; denounces any duty upon raw material as a burden upon both manufacturer and consumer; devotes an entire plank to the evils of a duty on wool; endorses the president for placing commercial relations of the people of the United States and Canada upon an equality.

When the name of Hon. Luzon B. Morris was presented a ballot resulted in his nomination. Senator Kirkham of Newington, was nominated for lieutenant governor. Henry Bishop for secretary of state, James G. Maltin for treasurer, Nichols Straub comptroller, electors at large, A. R. Burr, of Hartford, and H. B. Manning, of Meriden.

Bicycle Racing.

BOSTON, September 4.—H. G. Crocker, of Newton Mass., won the one mile professional handicap bicycle race here to-day. Knapp of Denver 3rd, Eastwood of Denver 3rd; time 2:42 2-5.

Caring for the City's Sick.

For some time past it has been seen by the ladies of the Bellevue society, and others engaged in benevolent work that something must be done at once for the numerous cases of sickness of women appealing to their sympathies and could not wait for the completion of the sanitarium. A start in this direction was last week effected by the renting of an unfurnished house situated on the northwest corner of Colorado and Weber streets, pledges of funds sufficient to pay the rent having just been secured. This establishment, which has been named the Eleanor home, was formally opened on last Sunday afternoon with religious services conducted by Revs. Hart and Merrill. Three patients are on hand, one is very ill, are at present being cared for at the home. On Thursday next, from 4 till 6 o'clock, an afternoon tea will be held at the home, to which the public are cordially invited and earnestly requested to bring with them donations of needful articles. Almost anything in the way of provisions groceries or house furnishings will be acceptable and most gladly received. Of course none of the money raised for [illegible] used for the present purpose but everything in the way of furniture that is now purchased will be selected with a view to its ultimate use in the sanitarium. The collection of funds for the latter is going on as rapidly as possible, and the needs which are now seen to be so pressing should urge all to more energetic work. The sooner the sanitarium is completed the sooner can more through and satisfactory work be done in caring for the sick and poor of our city.

General Harrison's Return.

TOLEDO, September 4.—General Harrison and party started for Indianapolis this morning. When the train reached Fort Wayne, at 1.10 p. m., General Harrison and party were taken in charge by the local committees. He will remain at Fort Wayne three hours and make a speech, going thence to Indianapolis by special train.

DEFIANCE, Ohio, September 4.—The train stopped at White House, Liberty and Napoleon, small villages, where several hundred people gathered to see him. He appeared, shook hands, but made no speeches.

FORT WAYNE, September 4.—After a number of stops at small places the train pulled into Fort Wayne at 1.45. Harrison was conducted to a public square where a reception was held.

The zeal shown by both houses of congress to enact laws against the Chinese is a sad exhibition of the extent to which the average congressman will go in order to make political capital for himself or for his party.

The republican majority in Vermont in yesterday's election is estimated at 25,000 to 30,000, which is the largest given the party in that state since the war. Evidently the republican party is not on the verge of disintegration in the Green Mountain state.

Governor Thompson of South Carolina is mistaken in believing that the greatest problem now before the people of that state was how to govern 400,000 negroes with 300,000 whites. It is strange that he should have forgotten that the democrats have mastered that question in several of the southern states.

The recent attempt on the part of the democrats to attribute to General Harrison the statement that a dollar a day was enough wages for any workingman has ignominiously failed. When the democrats resort to mud slinging tactics, it only shows how desperate their chances of success have become.

Maine elects state officers next Tuesday. Both parties have made a thorough and energetic canvass of the state. The democrats have nominated a railroad magnate for governor, and hope to receive the support of all the railroad corporations in the state. They will make a strong effort to defeat Congressman Reed, who was elected two years ago by a small plurality. And to that end they have enlisted the services of Hon. T. H. Patterson, of this state. As Maine has been considered debatable ground in a number of elections, the result of the present contest will excite more than ordinary interest.

It is urged by the advocates of the Mills bill that it only effects an average reduction in the tariff duties of about seven per cent. A comparison of the made on this basis, to show that the tariff commission of 1881-83 recommended a greater reduction of the tariff, than was accomplished by the Mills bill, and that leading republicans in and out of congress have favored a reduction as great as 40 per cent. If the ratio of reduction effected by the Mills bill extended through the entire dutiable list, there might be some grounds for the statement that it is a fair and just measure. But there is no reason for such a comparison. The duty on rice and sugar has been practically left undisturbed, while that on wool has been entirely removed. The Mills bill is not being attacked simply because it reduces the tariff 7 per cent., but because that reduction is effected unfairly and with great injury to the particular interests. There is no reason why American wool growers should be deprived of $6,000,000 protection in order to give the sugar planters a protection on their product of $57,000,000. Cheap sugar is just as essential as cheap clothing. The unfairness of the Mills bill in this respect is only the more emphasized by the fact that the $57,000,000 which the consumer pays the producer, goes virtually into the pockets of the men who control the sugar trust, one of the greatest monopolies now existing in this country. Owing to the limited quantity of sugar produced in this country they are able to control the product, and the price from no fear. There is no such thing as a wool trust and the $6,000,000 of protection on the raw product is distributed among the wool growers of several states and territories. The more the provisions of the Mills bill are studied, the more shallow does this pretense of fairness appear.

HOSEA TOWNSEND.

Sketch of the Candidate for Congress Nominated by the Republican Convention.

[Colonel Townsend was yesterday nominated for congress by acclamation by the republican state convention, and as there will be a lively interest to know something of the man at this time we reproduce from the GAZETTE of March 20, 1887, Fitz-Mac's vivid and striking pen picture of him. This picture appeared in the issue of [illegible] which was issued [illegible] and which upon the [illegible] GAZETTE last year and which were received with such general interest that the GAZETTE company is now reprinting them in book form, and an edition of two thousand will be issued almost immediately.]

Colonel Hosea Townsend, of Silver Cliff, is a man who has already figured a little in Colorado politics and in all probability will become a prominent and important element in the future of the republican party of the state. He is very generally but not very intimately known, and it will not be amiss to outline his history before attempting to portray his political character.

Ohio has probably contributed to the public life of the last generation fully a double proportion of prominent men contributed by any other state. The cause of this pre-eminence runs back to the beginning of the county to truth it runs back to the settlement of America. The population which early stamped the character of energy, intelligence and prosperity upon the state was drawn directly from pure and primitive American stock—from New England and Virginia. The blood of the Puritan and the blood of the cavaliers began for the first time since the settlement of the continent to mix on the territory of Ohio. The resultant strain has received the impress of all the strong characteristics of both the progenital elements of greatness, energy and intelligence from the Puritan blood; intelligence, pride and ambition from the cavalier. The fusion began with the century, and before the tide of migration had been able to modify the character of the population to any considerable extent. Ohio had produced two generations who more strongly represented the Anglo-American type than any other people in the United States.

Their energy gave them wealth, their intelligence gave them influence, their ambition secured them place. They have stamped their character upon the history of the country. It is notable and I believe even demonstrable, that the Anglo-Saxon blood reached its flood tide on the soil of Ohio with the generation born before 1800 the generation that is passing away. They had the elements of leadership, and they have been a race of leaders. Colorado and California, more distinctly than any other states, have united the same favorable conditions of blood and give promise of the same proportional result.

Colonel Townsend's family is a genuine New England stock, modified by liberalizing western influence for three generations on the soil of Ohio. They are now a numerous and influential family in the country extending from Cleveland to Toledo. Two of his brothers are among the wealthiest residents of the former city, and are largely connected with railroad enterprises, one of them having been president at one time of the Cleveland, Columbus and Indianapolis road.

Townsend's early life was surrounded by the healthful influences of a farm. At the breaking out of the rebellion he left school and entered the army. Soon after the close of the war he married a Miss Barnes of a prominent and enterprising family in or about Toledo, and sets out for Memphis, Tennessee, in the practice of law. His experience in the south was in all respects happy and prosperous. His young wife was a lady of superior natural endowments and high education. He was himself a handsome, intelligent, liberal-minded young man, with an easy and gracious presence, and contrary to the general experience of northern emigrants, they were cordially received into the elegant and stately society of the old south.

The lawyers of the secession states were at that time disqualified to practice in the courts, though of course still able to act as counsellors, and Colonel Townsend had the luck to drop at once into a large and lucrative professional business. He had secured a small but comfortable fortune and was the legal representative of several banks and the street railroads of Memphis at a period of life when most young lawyers are practicing before the justice courts, and this clientage he continued to hold after the reconstruction of the south and the restoration of the old barristers.

The cholera scourge that visited Memphis in 1877 and again in 1878 broke up the commerce of the city and rendered real estate property almost valueless. Twice Colonel Townsend had been obliged to flee with his family to the north, and on the last occasion became interested through his brothers with some Cleveland capitalists in Colorado mining, then warming up to fever heat by the fabulous discoveries at Leadville. He sacrificed a handsome property in Memphis and with a capital of about twenty thousand dollars came to Colorado in 1879 settling at Silver Cliff.

Having his professional library he [illegible] a new office, but his only serious business since coming west has been mining and that has proved so [illegible] share for [illegible] the halcyon fortunes of Silver Cliff built the best residence in the town settled his family in elegance and paid himself out to become one of the [illegible] millionaires of Colorado. He became, for a time, at least, a rich man [illegible] acres of town lots that were doubling in price every twenty four hours, innumerable "claims," when every hole in the ground was called a mine and would sell for a small fortune; safes full of stock certificates that have since gone to lighting the kitchen fire. The statistics of Colorado show that Silver Cliff in the height of her boom had a population of a little over 5,000. Four years later it had not to-day, less than one. The wreck was complete. Every fortune went down in it, and Townsend's among the rest. Town lots that had sold for from $200 to $1,200 in '80—lots not better than acres that Townsend owned and still owns—were actually sold by the sheriff in 1887 for twenty five cents apiece. As an episode of the disaster that overtook the place, it is sufficient to recall what every reader of the newspapers will remember, that last year the owners of the town's bonds voluntarily made a donation of $100,000 worth in the lonesome and deserted streets.

Though broken in fortune Colonel Townsend was by no means broken in spirit. He is a man of courage and resources, and though he has slipped nearly to the foot of the hill of fortune, he has never quite lost his grip. His profession has locked him on a fair competency and he has been able to keep his son at Yale and his daughter at Vassar, and to support a home which, wherever it lacked of former luxuries, has always been graced by the presence of a lady of unusual intelligence and culture—a lady who unites with every social grace the courage of a pioneer.

Colonel Townsend has never lost faith in the Custer county mines, and that faith seems at last about to be rewarded. He is now the owner of the once famous Silver Cliff mine and has interested Cleveland capital in a reduction mill which promises to give great value to the property.

I have departed from the purely political aspect of these portraits in this instance to give a brief biographical sketch for the reason that little seems to be known of Colonel Townsend, except what has been learned by his appearance at the last three state conventions, and because what little I have seen about him in the papers has generally been incorrect. I made his acquaintance soon after I came to Colorado, four years ago, and though the fortunes of politics made me one of the instruments of his defeat for congress at Colorado Springs, our friendship has never been interrupted.

He is a very charming man—a man in speaking of whom the language of eulogy becomes the natural instrument of description. His character, unlike that of Judge Symes, Mr. Ed Wolcott, Governor Eaton, and some others, is not one that leads itself to easy and emphatic definition. It is too level, his disposition too even for contrasts. Nothing that really shows the man as I think him, to me would make a portrait which the generality of his political acquaintances would recognize.

He is regarded as a fine looking, easy, amiable, slightly ambitious, and altogether interesting figure in politics—a man of fine presence, cordial and gracious manners and capable of a prudent, well-sounding but not strong political speech before a convention. This is all right as far as it goes, but it does not get at all to the real spirit of the man.

I consider him, with some slight reservation, the best politician—in the highest sense that I have met in Colorado—far beyond Routt, Symes, Eaton, Talbot, Bowen, Teller and Hamill, in capacity for leadership, and only equaled by Ed Wolcott. Let me not be misunderstood. I consider Senator Teller the most capable man in the state, and the best politician when he wants anything for himself, but he distinctly lacks the quality of leadership. Townsend is not so bright as Wolcott, not so fertile in ideas, not so ready in expedients, not nearly so magnetic a speaker. But he has two well-defined traits which in a long race out stay brightness, fertility, readiness and magnetism he has grit and [illegible]. With these [illegible] of ancient and proud New England ancestry, both are natural leaders of men, and between both there is a natural and inexhaustible sympathy which leads them to undertake each other and which is certain under prospective conditions to make them leaders in opposition. Wolcott has the brighter and [illegible] Townsend the safer judgment and steadier will. Wolcott is irritable, imperious and fascinating; Townsend patient, gracious and pleasing.

Wolcott has the charm that swiftly draws men; Townsend the charm that steadily holds them. Wolcott is the leader for a dash; Townsend the general for a campaign. Wolcott's manœuvre is the charge, his arm the swift sabre; Townsend's reliance the phalanx, his defense the set bayonet. Both are skilful in their special movements and neither is lacking in courage. Defeat brings pause to the one, and nerves the other to endurance. Thus [illegible] equipped these two able men for the battle of politics. Wolcott has every choice of ground—the influence of position, wealth, extensive and intimate acquaintance, strong friends and the command of large extra-political aids. Townsend, if he have any design to give battle for which I am not advised) must take any ground he can get and rely on any force which his natural qualities of leadership may draw to his standard. Experience is a sad damper of sentimentalism in politics, but I am yet far from believing that the rank and file of our political forces are so selfish and sordid that they could allow a chivalrous and capable general to lead a forlorn hope against an entrenched and fortified position with a feeling the thrill of admiration and would impel them to join the onslaught.

Townsend is distinctly a leader, for he also suppose that he is only moderately ambitious. The truth is he is only independently ambitious. His first love is to make a living for his family [illegible] doing so he consults the wishes of his people, and that duty may [illegible] ever but of the battle of [illegible] But if circumstances [illegible] him to [illegible] field he will inevitably [illegible] head. I do not mean to the first place but to leadership. He is not a man controlled power, nor grasping for place, but he has ambition and the courage and patience and constancy of purpose to withstand and overcome opposition. A strong sense of property is one of his political characteristics. He is not pushing and it is certain that he will never crowd himself upon the party. He is an inherent force but his temper is not domineering and dispositions, and the lack of [illegible] [illegible] is pretty sure to lead small men to underestimate the [illegible] character. No error more common among [illegible] people than to mistake a suave and even temper for a passive and feeble will. The very contrary is always the invariable rule. Emotionally [illegible] and like Wolcott's has the [illegible] [illegible] yet their dispositions are as different as night and day. Wolcott has the greater force of will, Townsend the greater constancy of purpose. Wolcott is a brilliant daring and dashing strategist whose disposition is first to crush opposition and then placate it. Townsend, with [illegible] less originality of method, [illegible] a calmer and safer judgment in the [illegible] of his purpose and a more conciliating temper, with no less determination of will to the execution of it. Wolcott strikes the imagination and rouses the enthusiasm of the young. Townsend commands almost [illegible] the [illegible] of [illegible] Nothing can exceed the admiration of Wolcott's strong qualities [illegible] I believe Wolcott is a very generous man and the generosity is only enhanced by the imperiousness which it descends upon men of inferior parts. But the natural endowments of men are not so dissimilar as their opportunities. Wolcott forgets this. Townsend does not. [illegible] [illegible] occasion to a timid and humble man. Approached by a spirited and imperious leader he is enthralled by a generous and captivating smile; but self-respect and experience are better satisfied in the long run with even handed justice. Townsend will never be found less than just.

I have thus stated the political traits of a man almost unknown by reputation and contrast with those of a politician whose characteristics are known to all. This was rendered necessary by the very fact of my subject being unknown. To myself it is a disagreeable method, because offering the reader the basis of verifying my estimates. If I am wrong about Wolcott I cannot be right about Townsend.

They are not likely to be contestants for the same office. Townsend is known to be no governor. Wolcott's ambition is the senate. To a superficial glance there would seem to be no reason why they should be in opposition. The reason is in human nature and in politics. Both men are natural leaders, but they lead by different methods, and either is too proud to call the other his master. Wolcott's road to the senate as far as some may judge from present indications will probably be with Eaton—and neither of them may reach it. From present indications it will go to a democrat. If Townsend enter the political field at all it is pretty certain that he will not enter against an idol of Gun from the party. I think that invitation is not unlikely to come. If either Townsend or Wolcott [illegible] will have what it has not got now—an acknowledged head.

Colonel Townsend is essentially a gentleman. Though very approachable and of cordial and genial manner, there is a dignified reserve in his character that is found which the familiarity of politics is not permitted to obtain. He is not the man to be caught touting for his own [illegible] and has failed [illegible] of the political shops. Neither is he ever found promoting [illegible] political chances around the lobbies and clubs of Denver.

CHARLES EGBERT CRADDOCK,

Otherwise Mary N. Murfree, Who Portrays "Tennessee Mountain Life."

(Special Correspondence.)

New York, Aug. 25.—Women who adopt masculine pen names do not always succeed in writing up to the name, not that the work of any man is superior to the work of women in general, but because women are women and have not to bring upon their stories even when they are doing their best to pretend that they were not such. The "swish" is not objectionable as a badge of inferiority. It is simply distinctive.

The lady whose literary work leaves no room for doubt as to her sex, Charles Egbert Craddock was never suspected of petticoats until she walked into the office of the Atlantic Monthly Magazine and introduced herself to the editor, Thomas Bailey Aldrich. Now, editors have managed to work up a reputation for acuteness, which, may the whole race of them pardon me for saying, they do not always sustain. This one, though admittedly wise and discerning, was taken quite off his literary feet, as it were, when he heard the actual rustle of the petticoats which clothed the person of "Mr Craddock," for so he had invariably addressed her in letters.

The masculine strength and vigor of style in Craddock's case was backed up by a chirography as bold and masculine as that of any statesman if not as illegible.

Her every day, unliterary name is Mary Noailles Murfree, and she was born near Murfreesboro, Tenn., and there passed her first years. Her family removed to Nashville and remained until 1858, when they returned to an old family plantation near Murfreesboro, where they lived until 1861. They now reside in St. Louis.

Miss Murfree's first story, "The Dancin-Party at Harrison's Cove," was written in 1878 and appeared in The Atlantic. It was followed by several other studies of Tennessee mountain life, which attracted no much attention that, in 1884 the publishers collected them into a volume entitled, "In the Tennessee Mountains." This is the very highest proof of literary appreciation a publisher can give, as a widespread prejudice exists among the craft against volumes of short stories. One and all stand ready to say that books made up of short stories will not sell. The public, they affirm, is a peculiar beast and wants its fiction in bulk, without change of diet or variety of subject. Indeed it has been limited that if some plano it would go off at a rattling pace solely on its bulk, merit being of no special moment.

Upon this book Miss Murfree's reputation as a writer was founded. It sold, too, in spite of the universal belief of publishers that short stories will not sell. It reached it is said, its sixteenth edition. Not until March, 1887, was it known that Charles Egbert Craddock was not a man but a miss.

"Where the Battle Was Fought" was her next book. It was a novel of southern life, describing the scene of the battle of Stone River. Then followed "The Prophet of the Great Smoky Mountains," a serial in the Atlantic and afterward published in a separate form. Her next wrote some tales for children for The Youths' Companion and "Wide Awake, one of which, "Down the Ravine," was also put into book form. Her last book, "In the Clouds," ran as a serial in The Atlantic before it came out in a volume.

Miss Murfree draws her characters and her localities from her native state, mostly from the mountains, a field hitherto uncultivated in literature, and a marvelously interesting one. Like Bret Harte, when she depicts wild life she is charming; but on conventional ground she might be said to scarcely hold her own. "Where the Battle Was Fought," although a Tennessee novel, lacks the mental atmosphere of the mountain. Its people are conventional and so is its construction. That it did not please as did the mountain stories is proven by its only reaching its sixth edition, while its predecessor went up to the sixteenth.

Miss Murfree's intimate knowledge of life in the Tennessee mountains is owing to the fact that she spent sixteen of her summers in out of the way mountain retreats. She has a perfect mastery of the dialect of the curious people whom she describes, and the outlines of their dreary lives, when portrayed by her pen, touch us with their deep pathos. She has power; her people are real; their woes are real, and their lives are so far removed from the conventional that they are all most idyllic. Her realism has been described as "picturesque realism." This is doubtless because readers who know nothing whatever about the people of the mountains of Tennessee [illegible] as existing outside the drama, poetic creations of the Great Smokies. In mentioning they seem like abstract conceptions. This writer is strong and dazzling without being in the least offensive. There is not an unlady suggestion in her works; never a line that the severest critic could write down as impure; never a page that deserves censure. She has proved what has before been proven but which writers longing to arrest public attention seldom fully realize—which is that the public are much more anxious for something good than for something bad. The bad books, like bad people, frequently have so much force and fascination in them that they win a hearing even from those who do not approve of them. A novel can be good without being dull. A fortune is always waiting for the man or woman who shall write a strong, clean, wholesome novel. Let writers of fiction, who are looking about for fresh ground to break remember that in this field they have less competition than in any other, and the prize is sure.

Considerable, as regards quantity, has been written about Charles Egbert Craddock, yet not much is known of her personally. She seems not to be one of those too numerous writers whose names are always confronting one in the newspapers—whose doings by and-by—which are chronicled by their manoeuvering and constitute their chief literary capital. She is one of the few whose works really sell by reason of their merit. Her friends say that she never had a manuscript rejected, and each of her books has won almost immediate appreciation.

Her range is not broad, but her drawing is strong and true and her coloring delicious. It has been said of her, and truthfully, that she depicts herself, or rather that the sin of parallelism can be laid at her door. Her [illegible] sometimes as like to each other as sisters in person, character, experience and destiny. Of [illegible], too, she is not entirely free. Such phrases as "flucelent enchantment," "sequele of an accusing conscience," "sudden [illegible] and [illegible]" are [illegible] her works with a too liberal hand, but they are at once forgiven by the many charms of her work.

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 5.—Secretary Vilas arrived in this city this morning from Minneapolis, and was met at the depot by a committee of citizens and escorted to the Plankinton House, where he was tendered a reception. Mayor Wallber delivered an address of welcome, to which Secretary Vilas responded. He said he was glad to be home again, and that he was feeling better than he expected, and that it was a great pleasure to meet so many of his old friends. He was sorry that he could not remain longer, but he had to go to New York to-night to attend the Columbus celebration. He spoke as follows:

After referring to the duty devolving upon the citizens of Wisconsin to select from their number a successor to Governor Rusk, who has been appointed Secretary of Agriculture, he said: The Democratic party is in power, and has been for the past two years. What has it done? It has reduced the revenue by the repeal of taxes on tobacco, and has left the tariff on the necessaries of life untouched. It has left the tariff on the luxuries of life untouched. It has left the tariff on the luxuries of life untouched. It has left the tariff on the luxu

J. R. McDonald & Co., who have been doing the work on the big cut on the Rock Island road, north of the city, have about 1,500 yards of dirt to move before completing their contract. The bridge over the cut on Cucharas street will be finished in a day or two.

Mr. B. Carnes, of the Western Coal and Mining company, has returned from Leavenworth, Kas., where he purchased a large plant of machinery from the manufacturing company. The plant will be delivered and ready for operation at the mines near Francerville in about six weeks.

Mr. W. E. Johnson of the firm of Johnson & Lovejoy, coal and ice dealers, sold the business to Mr. Charles Elias. The firm hereafter will be known as Elias & Logan. The new firm assume all liabilities and will collect all outstanding bills and will continue the business at No. 110 South Tejon street.

Mr. W. S. Stratton has received the contract for building a residence for Mr. J. K. Miller, on North Nevada avenue, in Enslow's addition. The house will be two stories in height, and will have a hard wood finish. Its cost is estimated at $4,000. The plans and specifications were drawn by Pease & Barber.

Manager Ford, of the base ball club, is negotiating with Al Tebeau, the crack short stop of the Albuquerque nine, and in all probability he will secure his services. Tebeau is a good all-around player, and is a very heavy hitter. He is a cousin of George Tebeau, of the Cincinnati club.

Carlile, Price & McGavock have established a large grading camp above the fair grounds and have commenced to grade for the additional track on the Denver & Rio Grande railroad. Five miles of double track will be constructed north, and five miles south of this city. Three camps in charge of Mr. Price's Campbell.

The Denver and Rio Grande railroad will sell, on the, 6th, 7th and 8th instant, tickets to Columbus, Ohio, and return for $23.50. Tickets good going until September 11th and returning until September 22d. An extension of 30 days can be had on these tickets by depositing them with the joint agent at Columbus, Ohio.

Grace & Griffith, the firm of contractors who have the contract for building the round house of the Rock Island in this city, are expected to arrive from Topeka to-morrow and work on the building at once. The round house will have stalls for ten locomotives and will be built of Colorado City stone.

Gladstone on British Inhospitality.

LONDON, September 5.—Mr. Gladstone, in a speech at Wrenham yesterday, said that the Times had done an unexampled compliment in answering a speech not yet delivered. He had no wish to interfere with the natural and legitimate performance of the Times in throwing dirt at him. He remained strong in the right but that the conduct of these proceedings were more useful than the cheers of his friends. He maintained the truth of his former statement that he had been a political prisoner—[illegible] better treated than were the imprisoned members of parliament. It had been denied that some of the Parnellites had broken the law, but the framers and administrators of that law were more guilty than the Parnellite offenders. He would not say that imprisonment had killed Mr Mandeville, but he declared that Mr. Mandeville was used in a manner that disgraced the Irish government and any government in the world would be disgraced that did the like.

While on the subject of the treatment of political offenders he observed that it was seldom that he was able to speak with satisfaction of the policy of Austria, but he had learned with the greatest satisfaction that Austria had given liberal home rule to the Galician Poles, and in that respect she [illegible] ... ring to the Welsh, sympathy with the Parnellites, he said the people of Wales would not be losers by the present agitation. They would find that the Scotch who were determined, were with them but when there came a demand for a solution of the Welsh question that demand could not be made until the Irish question was disposed of.

The Senate's Tariff Work.

WASHINGTON September 5.—The sub committee of the senate committee on finance, engaged on the preparation of the tariff bill, this evening received the second print of the new tariff bill. It contains, interleaved with the text of the bill, tables prepared ... showing in parallel columns the rates by the present law, those by the Mills bill and those proposed in the new bill. It is the last point to be made before the measure is laid before the full committee, which is expected to occur next week. Members of the sub committee and the committee clerks and experts are now preparing matter for the report to accompany the bill. Testimony and statements made to the sub committee making about 1500 pages in print will be formally submitted to the full committee with the bill and report.

The nature of the republican tariff bill to be reported to the senate by the finance committee is exciting considerable speculation. The St. Louis Globe Democrat says: "The senate tariff bill from the hints of its scope and purpose which we have seen is intended to reduce the revenue about $60,000,000. It reduces the duty on sugar 40 per cent, that on rice and lumber each 50 per cent and abolishes the internal tax on fruit spirits and on alcohol for use in the arts. The cut is to the internal taxes and in the duties on sugar and rice is heavier than that proposed in the Mills bill. The duties on wool, woolen goods and salt are unchanged. The banker interests will probably approve the senate measure, although it leaves their product with some protection while the house bill takes all the duty off."

The most influential delegation at the state convention was that sent from this county. Certainly there was no aspirant for a position on the state ticket from this county. As a result the position of the El Paso delegation had great influence. It was [illegible] it did not favor Mr. Cooper from an interested motive. It was not the result of a trade because El Paso county did not solicit anything but good state ticket. Either delegation agreed with El Paso county, but were embarrassed with candidates for state offices and therefore could not take so decided a stand. It would be an excellent thing if the policy were continued. This would not necessarily exclude El Paso county from being represented on the state ticket. It would result in the nomination of an El Paso man not through the vicissitudes of trading, but because the state at large would recognize the disinterested and patriotic party acts of El Paso county republicans.

The following sketch of the republican candidate for governor is from the Denver Times of yesterday:

John A. Cooper was born November 6, 1847, [illegible] Kansas. He left the farm and [illegible] department of Kansas college at the age of 16, [illegible] having four students [illegible] more than now, the [illegible] arduous duties and places of responsibility developed upon the few. Thus he received the thorough, training and mental discipline which [illegible] and encouragement which [illegible] his native state.
